

Experienced Environmental Construction Professional Joins G2 Consulting Group

TROY, MI, January 13, 2016 -- Patrick T. Bell P.G., an experienced professional in environmental consulting and land development services, has joined G2 Consulting Group as an environmental project manager.

With 20 years in the industry, Mr. Bell has had direct involvement in more than 4,000 environmental assessment, remediation, construction and land development projects throughout North America, ranging from mining and brownfields redevelopment to underground storage tank management, renewable energy development and consulting to financial institutions. At G2 Consulting, Mr. Bell's focus will be on providing environmental and construction services for land development projects.

"We've worked with Patrick on a number of projects through the years and appreciate his expertise and professionalism," said G2 principal Mark Smolinski P.E. "As our workload continues to grow, as it has for the past several years, we need people who can immediately jump in and add value for our clients and our bottom line. Patrick can hit the ground running."

Prior to joining G2, Mr. Bell spent his professional career in positions of increasing responsibility at Atwell-Hicks, AKT Peerless and Tim Hortons, providing environmental, construction, and development entitlement services.

"G2 is an energetic, technically competent, and fast growing firm," said Mr. Bell. "I especially like their client focus and the way they manage their business. I'm thrilled to join their team."

Mr. Bell graduated from Eastern Michigan University with a B.S. in Urban and Regional Planning and has a graduate certificate from Michigan State University in Environmental Remediation and Management. He resides in Oxford, Michigan with his wife Coreen and their two children.
